THE USE OF ANNUAL PLANTS.

For those who have not the equipment for starting annuals early, the use of annual plants is most helpful for the cutting garden, for open spaces in the perennial border, and for annual beds in the garden. Many desirable sorts, such as heliotrope, lantana, begonias, and geraniums, must be raised from cuttings; cannot well be grown from seed. Others of great popularity, such as ageratum, salvias, stock and the like, if not started as early as February or March, will not give the desired all-summer bloom. Much value is therefore gained by using plants properly started in the greenhouses.

The filling of Window Boxes is also a part of our work in which we strive to create harmonious color effects, to fill boxes suited to their location of sun or shade, and that will generally fit the environment in which they are placed. We will gladly help in your selection of window box plants, also construct, fill and place the boxes if you wish.
